The Sales Director

Dear Sir,

May I take this opportunity of drawing your attention to the publicity we could give all your books if you are able to supply us with full details. This information is necessary if we are to give accurate and effective promotion to your publications.

We believe we are giving a unique service with our Documentation and Supply Centre, which operates a computerised announcement system for new and forthcoming books. Detailed information is sent to 9,000 subscribers all over the world — not individuals but Public, Special and University Libraries, Educational and Research Institutions and Industrial Establishments buying every type of book. We also issue bibliographies and bibliographical guides at regular intervals on any topic of interest to our customers.

Many international publishers send us all their pre-publication information and review copies, since they find our service of great value and a most worthwhile form of promotion. In our experience we have often found blurbs to be vague as to publication date, and inaccurate as to the contents of the book. If we rely on these alone, we tend to devalue the service to our customers by possibly misleading them, and for this reason we ask publishers to send us review copies as their only contribution to our valuable promotion service.

If you would care to co-operate with us in this way, I should be grateful if you would send the material to Robert Maxwell & Co., at the above address:

6 jackets of each publication	to:	Library Services Manager
All pre-publication information, stating whether a first or a reminder announcement, and catalogues	to:	The Editor, Documentation & Supply Centre
Review Copies	to:	G. R. Marshall, Director

I look forward to hearing from you in the near future, and should there be any points requiring further clarification, please let me know.

Yours faithfully,

G R Marshall

G. R. Marshall,
Director.
